THE MOSES-TAYLOR COLLIDE.

Lively Proceedings at Alexandria—Novel Solution of a Tangle.

The Alexandria section of the Moses-Taylor controversy had another sitting yesterday afternoon, resulting in a large accession of bitterness, but no progress toward a conclusion.

Mr. Christy opened the proceedings by a further continuance of George Taylor for a further continuance, to give ground that the district courts had the case also before them, and that Judge Wylie had expressed the hope that Judge Meade would out of courtesy postpone the trial until after the hearing of the case.

Mr. Cole, on behalf of W. R. Moses, denied the correctness of his learned friend's report of Judge Wylie's words, and protested against any further continuance of the case.

Mr. Cole, on behalf of W. R. Moses, denied the correctness of his learned friend's report of Judge Wylie's words, and protested against any further continuance of the case.

Mr. Moses, of counsel for Moses, asked Mr. Christy to take the case to the record.

We have one that we received three or four days since, and which we can lend to them."

Let Taylor take the stand and tell us why he has not his "Cure for Nervous Diseases," which he has used with great success.

"You honor," said Mr. Moses, rising up with his hands on his hips, and voice trembling with suppressed anger, "this man promises you a cure for your nervous diseases, and he has not his 'Cure for Nervous Diseases,' which he has used with great success."

"I really thought that was the counsel's 'Cure for Nervous Diseases,' but I mean to tell you, Mr. Christy, that I don't want any controversy with you, but I'll show you that I am not a man who is to be trifled with."

Judge Meade decided that if Taylor would make affidavit that he had sent to the clerk of the court for the record in question, the controversy would be held and an order was taken to allow this to be done. On resuming the trial, Judge Meade announced that the direction of the court was complied with, and Judge Meade announced that the direction of the court was complied with, and Judge Meade announced that the direction of the court was complied with.

The Civil Suit Against Burdette.

The papers in the civil suit against Col. J. O. P. Burdette, late superintendent of the post-office building and disbursing clerk, were taken to the solicitor of the treasury yesterday after a suit will be begun at once for the recovery of $45,000 from his bondsmen. There are two bonds each for $25,000, the first bearing date Feb. 2, 1875, signed by Wm. Rutherford, E. C. Ingersoll, Wm. B. Williams, and John Coughlin as sureties; the second bearing date Oct. 2, 1875, signed by H. M. Hutchings, S. L. Jeffries, and E. S. Ingersoll. The sum for which suit is to be brought at this time does not cover the money he is said to have received from the sale of the post-office building, as there is a doubt whether the bond covers this.

THE MOSES-TAYLOR COLLIDE.

An Inquiring Laboring Man.

To the Editor.

There is one thing that I am unable to understand in connection with the pending presidential contest, and as there are hundreds of thousands of workmen in the country whose welfare is affected to greater or lesser extent I desire information on this subject.

Let me say just here that I am no hide-bound politician of either school, and will follow the call of my political conscience. I seek information, and believe I voice the sentiments of enough people to elect a president when I say that the working element of this country needs a right more recognition than they have heretofore received from either party.

What I desire to know is in what manner will the workingman be benefited by putting in power a party pledged to reduce the expenses of the government, to reform the tariff, &c.?

If by reduction of expenses means the discharge of laborers and mechanics employed on government works, the closing of navy yards, and the inauguration of the contract system, and by reform of the tariff means the free admission of articles of foreign production or manufacture in competition with articles produced or manufactured here, and whose production or manufacture affords employment to our people, then it is the solemn duty of every citizen to vote against the party advocating such measures.

On the other hand, if it is to the benefit of the laboring element to permit the longer continuance of the contract system for government work, our government owes something to us, and when it has work to do we should have preference given to the men who have government pay more for their work if done by us than if done by the contractor.

On the other hand, if it is to the benefit of the laboring element to permit the longer continuance of the contract system for government work, our government owes something to us, and when it has work to do we should have preference given to the men who have government pay more for their work if done by us than if done by the contractor.
